Farm Bureau Awards Presented

ROANOKE, Dec. 10 - The Virginia Farm Bureau Federation presented its highest award to two recipients at its 49th state convention here tonight.

Edar Fisher, Jr., director of the Virginia Council on Health and Medical Care, and the Animal Science Department of VPI&SU, were presented the Farm Bureau's Distinguished Service Award.

VPBF President Robert B. Delano presented the coveted awards at the farm organization's annual awards banquet. This is the first time that two such awards have been presented in the same year.

Delano said the award was presented to Fisher for his "driving spirit and dedication to service to upgrade the availability of medical service and health care services to rural and urban citizens in Virginia."

Dr. Milton B. Wise, head of the Animal Science Department, accepted the award for VPI&SU. The department, according to Delano, received the award for its outstanding achievements in education, research and extension activities.

Delano noted that the Animal Science Department has shown strong leadership in recent years when livestock volume has increased in Virginia. In 1940, there were 52,000 beef cows in Virginia, and today there are 600,000 head.

As director of the Virginia Council on Health and Medical Care, Fisher has shown outstanding results in physician and dentist referral services. This service brings communities looking for physicians or dentists together with doctors looking for opportunities.

Fisher has also worked with Farm Bureau in its rural health program promoting health careers, and sponsoring nutrition and health forums.

In presenting the award to the Animal Science Department, Delano said the VPBF Board of Directors wished to recognize the outstanding contribution made to not only the livestock industry, but also to the Virginia economy.

Previous individual winners of this award are: the late Del. Thomas Frost of Warrenton; Roy D. Davis of Halifax; Ben R. Ivey III of Front Royal; Clifford O. Wood of Nelson County; former state Senator D. Woodrow Bird of Bland County and former Congressman Watkins M. Abbitt.

The previous organization winner was the Virginia Chapter of the Future Farmers of America.

FIFTH DISTRICT, VIRGINIA

WASHINGTON- On Friday, December 6, we held workshops in Amelia, Lunenburg, and Nottoway Counties, and I also had an opportunity to meet with people from other area. The workshops were well-attended and, as is consistently the case, it was a pleasure to talk with the people, although "pleasure" is scarcely the word to associate with the topics discussed. The Four F's led the list- Food, Fuel, Fertilizer and Finances - the first three rising faster than the fourth being the primary problem.

Another consistency with our workshops was the revelation of yet another area where the Federal government - as usual, because of action by the Congress - has devised a new way to frustrate the citizen. This time, it is the Family Education and Privacy Act, offered by Senator Buckley as an amendment to the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, and usually identified as the Buckley Amendment.

The intent is good. In entirely too many cases, information in a student's school files has been made available to government agencies, prospective employers, and hosts of others, while the same information could not be obtained by the student or parents. Sometimes such information was inaccurate, and there was no way for it to be known, let alone corrected, by those most directly concerned. Implementation does not appear to be a problem in the lower grades, in any event, no problems have been reported. But at the high school and college level it is creating havoc, complicated by the fact that an 18-year-old enjoys the privilege of adulthood, and thereby becomes the person with access to the files. At least one college to my personal knowledge has informed parents they will no longer receive information on grades, notices of academic probation, suspension, deans listing, or withdrawal from college. One parent has been told that even if his daughter were injured the family would not be notified for fear of violating federal law. Still other problems derive from the fact that the student now has access to information furnished on a confidential basis by others - letters of recommendation and parents' financial reports to name two sorts. Adding to the headaches, the provision went into effect on November 19, yet regulations have not been provided by HEW, and as of right now the Department cannot tell you when they will be made available. A lot of this trouble could have been avoided, if the bill had been given full hearings by a Committee. Potential problems areas could have been identified, and the language drafted in a manner to avoid them. This was not done, and untold time and money will be expended on implementation. It will remain for the 94th Congress to hold hearings and amend the amendment, and this is anticipated early in the year.

The Mayor of Kenbridge recommended a p r o c e d u r e which could save localities in Virginia thousands of dollars. He suggests the required testing for water quality standards ordered by the government be performed by the Community Colleges. These institutions have the necessary laboratory equipment, and can meet this need while also training technicians. We have passed this on to he Community College and Water Control Boards, and are hopeful it can be adopted. There are possibly other areas where local governments can make use of these schools as they search for ways to trim the budget. As a former member of the General Assembly I was a strong supporter of our Community College system, and am proud of the work they are doing.

In the waning days of this Congress a number of bills are being passed which are ill-thought-out and can be extremely costly. They are a reaction - or perhaps over - reaction to our sagging economy. One can be extremely inflationary, since it will pour money we are going to have to borrow into essentially non-productive make - work projects, which could add to your tax burden. Admittedly, a 6-5 percent unemployment rate is bad; if you are among those out of work, you are 100 percent unemployed. And certainly most people would rather work at a productive job with a hope of a future than on a short-term WPA-type job. But this is not 1934, and with public works, unemployment payments, and welfare programs expanding at their present rate we are breeding a depression psychology the effects of which can extend far beyond the present problem. At a time when the economy was booming, there remained a group who managed to manipulate the programs intended for those in real need. Energy and intellect which could have been applied to gainful employment was utilized instead to obtain government checks. Regularly I am told of those who plan their

Auto Belt System

RICHMOND - Alt h u g h standard lap belts and shoulder harnesses are required by Virginia law to pass Motor Vehicle Inspection, ignition interlock systems, warning lights and warning buzzers, formerly required by the U. S. Department of Transportation, are not and have never been required to pass inspection, Colonel H. W. Burgess, Supt. of State Police announced today.

Colonel Burgess said the Department of Transportation no longer requires interlock systems to be installed in motor vehicles at the time of manufacture. This action resulted from an act of Congress directing the Department to discontinue requiring the systems after February 25, 1975. The Department reacted by declaring the non-requirement immediate.

Colonel Burgess was emphatic in calling attention to the fact Virginia law requires that all conventional belts and harnesses must pass inspection as to belt condition, buckle condition and attachment.

In addition, Virginia law requires inspection of belts and harnesses installed in connection with interlock and warning systems, even though inspection is not required to extend to such systems.
